Code of Conduct

For all Research and Innovation Days participants and attendees

All attendees and participants are expected to respect the following code of conduct for the duration of the European Research and Innovation Days. Participation in the event implies acceptance of the following rules.

- Respect all participants and their opinions and views expressed
- No disruption of events or discussions
- Aim to establish collaboration and mutual understanding instead of conflict
- This is a digital platform, but please remember that there are real people behind the screen. If you wouldn’t do it in person, please do not do it here
- Do not share inappropriate content with others. This includes materials inciting or depicting violence, including images of a sexual nature
- No harassment or intimidation of other participants, such as hate speech, especially based on gender, ethnicity, age, nationality, religion.
- Do not engage in other behaviours that are inappropriate for a professional environment
- No commercial promotion of any kind
- Do not publish other people’s private information or data without their permission
- Use your personal login information when accessing the platform.
- Do not hand out your personal login information to any third party.
- The event and breakout sessions- may be recorded by the organisers for future use and online viewing, any parallel recording and distribution of the event themselves is forbidden.
These rules apply in any environment of the European Research and Innovation Days: during online sessions, over the Hub chats and on networking calls organised by the platform.

Participants engaging in such behaviours will be given warning by the event organisers and/or removed from the event platform.

Please alert the organisers if you notice behaviour of this kind taking place, by contacting: info@research-innovation-days.eu

Thank you very much for your collaboration
